

Staff transitions: Tisa Lewis and Nadine Banks retire

Two transitions in the ATS staff will occur this summer.

Tisa Lewis completes a decade of work with ATS. She initially came to the Association in 2005 to work with Student Information Resources and, after a year of excellent work in that area, was asked to move to accreditation. She has been an accrediting officer for the past nine years and for the last three has served as senior director of accreditation and institutional evaluation. She has served the missions of the Association and Commission with great care and attentive concern for the schools, the accrediting standards, and the procedures and administrative processes that link them together. Lewis will return to her home in Black Mountain, North Carolina.

Nadine Banks has also decided to retire from full-time work at ATS this summer. She began her employment at ATS in 2008 and has served during that time as executive assistant, which has included, among many responsibilities, administrative support for the ATS Board of Directors. With plans to remain in Pittsburgh, she will continue in a part-time role, and ATS will continue to benefit from her exceptional administrative care and gracious hospitality.

ATS has greatly benefitted from the contributions of both of these gifted colleagues, and we wish them all the best as they embark on their next chapters.
